Diko,
Of light skin, of smooth hair and long;
Her smell is sweet and gentle,
She never stinks of fish
She never breathes sweat
Like gatherers of dry wood
She has no bald patch on her head
Like those who carry heavy loads
Her teeth are white
Her eyes are like
Those of a new born fawn
That delights in the milk
That flows for the first time
From the antelope's udder
Neither her heel nor her palm
Are rough; but sweet to touch
Like liver; or better still
The fluffy down of Kapok
